EVERGREENS FOR FARM WINDBREAKS

FRESHLY DUG, LOCALLY GROWN TREES, FULLY ACCLIMATED

Again this year, we offer the best of the windbreak evergreens. It is hard to imagine a better investment in comfort, both for yourself and livestock, than an evergreen windbreak.

Plant 16 to 18 feet apart in two to five staggered rows.

All of these trees are grown right here in Milford and are accustomed to our hard winters and dry summers.

BLACK HILLS SPRUCE

We consider this our finest value in windbreak evergreen

Beauty, vitality, symmetry and the habit of holding its branches all the way to the ground combine to make this an ideal windbreak tree. A favorite for specimen lawn planting as well as groves. Very hardy and drought resistant.

Compact grower, very hardy—an ideal windbreak

DOUGLAS FIR

Noted for its rapid growth and its freedom from insect troubles, this tree is making big gains in popularity each year. As a small tree it is irregular but by the time it has reached 3 feet it will be dense and symmetrical. Holds its branches to the ground. Recommended by Iowa State College.

A fast grower, of open habit when small. Makes an excellent tree.

While the trees listed here are not the extra select blue shiners, many of them will develop into blue specimens. They are all grown from seed from selected blue trees. In other respects, the Colorado Spruce is very similar to the Black Hills Spruce of about the same rate of growth and just as hardy.

A beautiful hardy tree, many will have a bluish cast. One of the best windbreak trees.

Colorful FLOWERING SHRUBS

HOW TO GROW SHRUBS Any good growing soil is excellent. Spade deeply and work down well, as you would for a garden crop. Keep shrubs 20 to 25 inches away from the foundation. Set deeply and firmly, the larger growing types 24 to 36 inches apart, with dwarf varieties 12 to 18 inches apart. Trim back the tops to insure quicker, better growth, then keep them cultivated the first year or two, watering them in the evening during dry spells. After the first year they will require little care other than any annual pruning you may wish to give them. Each year's growth will add to the charm of your planting, and to the size and quality of the blooms.
